Kazimierz Dąbrowski

- Personality-shaping through Positive Disintegration, 1967.

Polish psychologist, psychiatrist, and physician, Kazimierz Dąbrowski conceptualized Theory of Positive Disintegration which addresses breaking away from social norms, in particular, as staging of personal crisis which has the potential to lead to personal expansion and evolvement. Anxiety, depression, and psychoneurosis which are induced at such critical moments become hypersensitive responses to personal crisis. An individual driven to autonomy thus gets involved in a transformational process which requires multilevel perception to one’s own values, opinions, and choices. Such multilevel perception is in contrasted with crisis which tends to present us with predetermined choices and decisions in terms of either/or alternatives. Dąbrowski saw personality as existential and experiential processes of development and becoming; as a continual creation and re-creation in which emotional reactions are key guidance. He attributed most significance to the narrative in subject formation, autobiography in particular, and used it in his practice. Dąbrowski’s ideas contributed dramatically to the recognition of the gifted and talented.

Inner Autonomy

The notion of passing and passageway – passing as expiring but also as passing over into a different form, transforming.
“You have the need and the right to spend part of your life caring for your soul. It is not easy. You have to resist the demands of the work-oriented, often defensive, element in your psyche that measures life only in terms of output -- how much you produce -- not in terms of the quality of your life experiences. To be a soulful person means to go against all the pervasive, prove-yourself values of our culture and instead treasure what is unique and internal and valuable in yourself and your own personal evolution.”

WHAT WE KNOW TODAY

- Nothing in the universe can be still.
- Everything moves and vibrates – Everything is a Vibration.
- Nothing is wasted – Energy is never lost, only transformed. As energy, we never cease.
- We are incomplete – we are imperfect, and that is a perfect guarantee of our continuity.
- Everything is dynamic, relational, and becoming.
- Every position, life form is an invaluable perspective that adds to the collective knowledge and evolution.
- Divisions, contrasts, oppositions are means by which we make distinctions and refine our directions, desires, aspirations, and choices.
“What is your spiritual practice?” “I dance.” “It makes sense.”

With a hungry heart and bare feet
I found our life
As great as our capacity to feel
Dance is our birthright

In the quickening of such grace
I dared
To bare the soul”
